

It has always been the goal of the World Series of Board Gaming to celebrate you, the players.

Since our inception, the dream has always been to turn on the television and see you playing Ticket to Ride for a million bucks while rocking a hat that shows off your endorsement deal with Phantom Sleeves.

With this objective in mind, the WSBG is excited to present our inaugural competitor rankings based upon our 2023 event. The bullet points below will help to shed light on how this list was created.

- This ranking reflects only results from the World Series of Board Gaming's 2023 Ring Tournament. We are in the process of compiling a comprehensive ranking of players based upon all our past results, as well as data gathered from Meeple League and other partners. This master list, which we hope will be considered the gold standard of tabletop player rankings, will take some time to complete. But rest assured, we are as anxious to see the finished list as you.
- These rankings reflect a player's overall success in our 2023 Ring Tournament main event. Number of wins, specific number of total Ring Event entrants, opponents' win percentage and several other relevant factors were all incorporated into these results.
- A total of 238 competitors achieved victory at least once across all 16 Ring Events in 2023. Each of those players can be found within these rankings. All WSBG attendees accrue merit whether victorious or not, and may eventually be included in our comprehensive ranking of tournament board gamers from around the world.
- Some players compete under a pseudonym to protect themselves or their identity. The names within these rankings are the names given to us by these competitors that are shown on their WSBG badges.
- The WSBG is compiling a database of player profiles that we can use to provide information about a competitor should any of their games be broadcast. The top 50 players within this ranking will have a small sample of their WSBG accomplishments listed alongside their names. We are making plans for each competitor to be able to provide us information about themselves to enhance their profile.
- Any discrepancies or incorrect information may be addressed at support@wsbgvegas.com.
